

Submit a Guest Post

Just as our bloggers have a point of view, we hope also to read yours and we welcome guest blogs as a way to further enrich discussions on global health matters. Our promise for the this blog is to provide 'food for thought' and we thank you for your interest in contributing a post to make it a lively global health debate platform.

Please note that publication of posts is at the discretion of the IFPMA, based on relevance of the subject matter as related to global health issues. Please review the guidelines for submissions below, and email communications@ifpma.org if you wish to submit a post or topic for consideration.

- Tell us who you are – submit a brief biography (no more than 2-3 lines) and a photo for inclusion with your post.
- Keep length of posts between 200-600 words.
- Include links to sites, articles or other materials that supplement your topic.
- If possible, suggest images or videos to accompany posts. If you have photos/videos available for publication, please submit them along with your post and include caption information and attribution information.
- If you don't have images available, we will add one from our own photo stocks or from publicly available resources.

Please note all posts are reviewed for appropriateness before publication. Once posted, IFPMA will be also sharing your post through other social media channels e.g. LinkedIn and Twitter. We also encourage you to do the same to further encourage the exchange of views.

Thank you again for your interest in engaging in this important debate and making Global Health Matters blog an interesting platform for exchanging views.

Also, please feel free to contact us with any questions or comments regarding the site.